Parish Mass Book Page 117, Order of Mass P6, The Nicene Creed P11

For many people there is a tendency to worry about material things and to forget what is really important. Over time we all tend to accumulate possessions...many of us like to have the latest phone or laptop, furniture, clothes or car...but Jesus offers a gentle reminder that, really, these are not the things that matter.

The character in today's Gospel had such a good harvest of crops that he ran out of space. He built bigger barns and then sat back to 'eat, drink, have a good time' – a phrase which is often translated into the popular expression 'eat, drink and be merry!' Yet things do not go according to plan.

Today's readings offer us an opportunity to examine our relationship with possessions. The Vikings believed you could take riches with you when you died, and filled boats with treasures to take into the afterlife. We know that we come into this world with nothing and leave with nothing.

Our farmer friend had forgotten to focus on the more important things in life – he had stored up riches on earth instead of focusing on making himself 'rich in the sight of God'.

What treasures are important to us?
